DEGREES/PROGRAMS OFFERED

3-Year BA 4-Year BA Honours BA Minor

INTRODUCTION

Classics is the study of the Ancient Greek and Roman worlds from the perspectives of literature, history, archaeology, and art history. For various historical reasons, the Classical world and Classical languages have had an enormous influence on critical contemporary concepts as, for example, democracy, athletics, medicine, politics, and philosophy. Moreover, the literature and art of ancient Greece and Rome continue to be a source of creative inspiration for writers, artists, and filmmakers across the globe. The University of Winnipeg Classics Department is committed to a critical approach to the ancient Mediterranean world and its diverse historical interpretations. The multicultural nature of the ancient Mediterranean world provides the opportunity to contemplate in the past issues of current importance, such as community identity in multiethnic settings, the influence of various political systems on the historical development of communities, the dynamics of social and economic inequality, the function of literature in the creation of cultural values, and the relationship between technology and leisure - or between technology and the exertion of power. The courses offered are designed to provide a broader and deeper contemplation of ancient society and of ourselves as members of our own contemporary society. Courses in Classics in themselves constitute a liberal education but may also be taken to supplement one or another of a wide range of disciplines. A degree in Classics prepares students for any pursuit that involves analytic thinking and clear communication of complex ideas. Within the Classics Department, you may choose to concentrate on courses in Classical Civilization or on courses which study the Classical languages of Latin and Ancient Greek. The Classics Department offers the 3-Year, 4-Year, and Honours BA degrees. The Department of Classics participates in the Interdepartmental Minor in Comparative Literature. For eligible courses, please see Comparative Literature in this Calendar.

Graduate Studies

Students who plan to proceed to graduate studies in Classics are strongly advised to enroll in as many language courses as possible.

4000 Level Courses: Minimum 3.0 GPA (B) in Major courses (students lacking the requisite 3.0 GPA should consult the department concerned regarding eligibility to take 4000 level courses) Permission of the Department is required for each 4000 level course

COURSE LISTINGS

The Classics Department has organized its courses into two areas of specialization. This division is provided as a guideline to the Areas of Study available for concentration.

Students whose primary interest is the study of ancient Greek and Roman society and culture may complete any of a wide range of courses which do not require a knowledge of the Latin and Greek languages. These have been organized into different categories to aid the student in selecting relevant courses.
